Publishers: Get Involved with EO If you are active in the publishing community, you may already know about EO (Electronic Office). It's an online service that allows you to store, share and manage information with other colleagues. EO was launched in 2002, following the acquisition of Information Services by BT. After two years of development and testing, the service was made available to all BT Business customers. If you want to get involved, then please check out the EO website at www.eo.org.uk. Alternatively, you could contact us at To get an overview of the e-office services offered, please click here. The EO Programme Management Group As we believe EO is about sharing information, it's important that it's easy to find and store. We've also worked on increasing the ease with which users can input, view and organise information. Our Programme Management Group meet regularly to discuss new ideas and to provide feedback on our service.
