As for the Nexus 4, it has NEXUS4 out of the box. Q: Unknown Payment Gateway I recently started developing a mobile application. I have noticed that the payment gateway calls differ depending on whether it is in my app or on the web. When logged into my site, I can see "PayPal" And, when logged into the web version of the site, I can see "PayPal.com" I have no idea what payment gateway is being called. If it matters, my web host is GoDaddy. If someone could tell me how I could find out the name of the payment gateway being called that would be great. A: The GatewayName header is sent by the payment provider to your server on each transaction. If your provider doesn't set it or your server isn't set to respond with it, it won't appear in your server's logs.

Effect of nitric oxide on aldehyde dehydrogenase activity of the liver of spontaneously hypertensive rats. The metabolic status of nitric oxide (NO) in the liver of spontaneously hypertensive rats (SHR) is different from that of normotensive rats (Wistar-Kyoto rats; WKY) by measuring aldehyde dehydrogenase (ALDH) activity. As a biomarker of NO, we examined the changes in ALDH activity and its regulating factors by NO synthase (NOS) inhibitor, N-omega-nitro-L-arginine methyl ester (L-NAME). The activities of NADH- and NADPH-dependent ALDH increased in the liver of SHR compared with those of WKY. In L-NAME-treated SHR, the activity of NADH-dependent ALDH increased to the level of WKY, while the activity of NADPH-dependent ALDH did not change. Thus, NO is important in the maintenance of the normal levels of NADH-dependent ALDH activity.
