Dynamic Bone v1.1.7 description. So far I have following in which I must cut out a whole file (self contained bit of code) so as to. This is an archive file which can be opened with 7-zip (or any other archive.Q:

How to put together three instances of the same object without the need of an array? I have an API with a bunch of objects I get with a POST request, now I want to retrieve that information from a website. So I need to know which object each link in the website is pointing to, I could do that with an array, but this would become really huge and I will need 3 websites, so I was wondering if there is another way that allows me to make a big SQL request with three requests at the same time. So in this case each object should create a table in the database, each cell should point to a link of the website, so for example I would have this: [0] | link 1 | [1] [1] | link 2 | [2] [2] | link 3 | [3] [3] | link 4 | [4] [4] | link 5 | [5] I made something like this,

$response = $_POST['response']; $r = new Request();
    $r->headers->header('Content-Type',
'application/json'); $r->post('example.com/someurl/');
$responseArray = $r->post(Api::$api, 'get', '10000');
    foreach($responseArray as $key => $row) {
        $this->db->query("INSERT INTO table1 (id, link)
            VALUES ($key, '');");
```
