I use pen and paper and then type the notes into my PC (my thesis is in Word 2007). This makes it easier to keep my notes organized and easier to keep track of ideas. I use WriteNow to track my thoughts. It's a nice app with nice features, but I wish it had an easier way to draw text. I'd like to be able to select text and then draw lines around it. Instead, I have to draw a box around the text, save it, then go back to the text and select it. There are other ideas I have for drawing text. I just need to find the time to work on them. I bought a new tablet to use for writing notes. It's the HandeGo Solitude 7. I've had the HandeGo Solitude 5 for a while, and it's a great device, but it doesn't have an on-screen keyboard. As soon as I got this new tablet, I started looking at different apps. I quickly found I preferred the HandeGo Solitude 7 to other tablets. I like the size and weight of the tablet. The on-screen keyboard is comfortable for both right-handed and left-handed people. I like the software. The tablet and I have developed a rapport. I like it so much that I paid for the Pro version of the software. It has fewer limitations than the free version. It's about $30, which is more than I'd spend on other tablets, but I have use of it now for a year. I'm not going to write in the HandeGo Solitude 7. I have a laptop with me, so I'll use that. But I can see myself using it when I'm out and about and I don't have a laptop, or want to use a laptop. It's perfect for those situations. 82157476af
